Editorial By ALEX. H. WASHBURN

REPUBLICAN siege-guns opened up yesterday and today on the proposal to give President Roosevelt authority to scale down American tariffs for trade treaties with favored nations. National harmony on the general recovery measures is rudely shattered when we reach the tariff issue—yet tariff revision may be worth more than all the rest combined.

McMath Follows Mexican General to Band Concert

Sam Resumes Series on His Experiences Along Rio Grande

Stranded Overnight in Ojinaga—Most Desolate of Towns

Editor's Note: This is the third of a series of letters written by Sam McMath, former Hope man, to S. G. Norton of this city concerning war years along the Rio Grande. The two first letters were written several months ago. Mr. McMath has completed a total of 12, the last 10 of which will be published consecutively by The Star beginning today.

Dear Mr. Norton: John Christopher, manager of a wholesale grocery house at Maria, Texas, was a good pal of mine during the years I lived in the Big Ben country. "Chris" and I were young bachelors at the time and we held a lot in common. We loved music and enjoyed playing bridge; we were fond of the good life, of pouring honey in the gal's ears; and I shamelessly admit, were not averse to taking a nip out of a bottle—when we could get it.

When Chris learned that General Martinez, commander of military forces in Chihuahua, was coming to Ojinaga to inspect the garrison stationed there, and bringing his crack military band with him, he suddenly discovered that he had some old accounts along the border that needed looking after. He asked me to accompany him. Needless to state, I was happy to accept his invitation.

Mexican Heat

We left Maria early of an August morning. When we passed down off the highlands into the Rio Grande valley, it was like entering a furnace. By the time we reached Presidio, the Texas town opposite Ojinaga, Chihuahua, the heat was almost unbearable.

After Chris had interviewed his customers at Presidio, we went over to Ojinaga where a cold, amber-colored liquid could be exhaled from kegs at two-bits a can, without violating the Volstead Law.

Of all the Mexican towns I have visited, Ojinaga stands out in my memory as the most desolate. It sits on a high hill overlooking the Rio Grande valley. All buildings are of adobe. Some are plastered on the outside and painted a dazzling white; others remain the color of the mud from which they were made. At the top of our visit all were littered with holes, reminders of the big battle that had been fought there during the Orozco revolution. Scraggly chickens and mangy, half-starved dogs roamed the streets searching bits of food. Everyone who could do so remained indoors to escape the intolerable heat.

After transacting a little business with the fairest innkeeper in a beer parlor, we went to the only hotel in town to engage lodgings for the night. We couldn't return to Presidio after the band concert because the ferry closed at 6 p. m. Imagine our dismay when we were informed that every available room had been engaged by General Martinez and staff. After riding 66 miles over a rough road to head that band play, we were determined not to miss it if we had to sleep in the streets.

About 3 o'clock in the afternoon found us sitting on the bench in the plaza, watching troops going through fancy drills. The men had recently been equipped with new uniforms and looked smart, smart.

They Meet El Jefe

Presently a gait of a Mexican stopped directly in front of us. A high cartridge belt and six-shooter adorned his midsection. When I glanced up to meet his gaze, he smiled.

He was recruiting. I smiled in return, or at least tried to. Chris afterwards declared that my efforts resulted in a mightily sickly looking little fellow. It did. At any rate I

Republicans Hit Tariff Bargaining

Would Give F.D.R. 90 Billions' Stake in World Gamble

Vandenberg and Davis Lash Out at Bill in the Senate

BATTLE LAUNCHED

Senator Borah Delivers Opening Fire of the Opposition

WASHINGTON.—(AP)—The administration proposal for a tariff bill was described Friday by Senator Vandenberg of Michigan as "a blind speculation in which we hand the president 90 billion dollars' worth of blue chips—that being the normal value of our domestic markets."

Borah Raps Tariff Trade

WASHINGTON.—(AP)—Warning against a "dictatorship" which he said enslaves the masses under Fascism, Naziism and Communism, Senator Borah assailed the administration proposal for a tariff bill in the senate on Thursday as an unconstitutional delegation of the taxing power to the executive.

Speaking after Senator Harrison, Democrat, Mississippi, had upheld its constitutionality and Senator McNary of Oregon, Republican leader, had appealed for exemption of arm products from tariff reductions in the proposed international pact, Borah, Idaho Republican independent, asserted:

"The integrity of constitutional government has never meant so much to the average man or woman, to those whom Lincoln was wont to call the common people, as at this cry hour."

"Nowhere on this round globe today do the common people enjoy the blessings of liberty except in a constitutional democracy. There and there alone are to be found a free press, free speech, personal liberty and all those blessings which distinguish the people of a free country from the heathen, hapless, persecuted individuals who constitute the mere cogs of some vast machine in an absolute dictatorship."

"Fascism, Naziism, Communism, appealing to the forces of terror and fanaticism, have buried the individual beneath the schemes of personal advantage and now are constantly ridiculing and attacking democracy. Why do they attack democracy? They attack democracy because it stands for personal liberty and free speech."

Before the debate ended for the day, Senator Long of Louisiana became the first Democrat to oppose the bill. He agreed with Borah's contention that it was unconstitutional because it gave the president power exclusively reserved by the constitution—Congress and then, in factious vein added:

"If the president gets up in the morning and decides the sugar in his coffee costs too much he could take his pen and ruin the whole domestic sugar industry by reducing the tariff on Cuban sugar 50 per cent, or do the same if he thought the chocolate at his afternoon bridge was too high."

"I know it has been said that this delegation of power is for a limited time and is to be given to one in whom the people have the greatest confidence, but the precedent established by Franklin D. Roosevelt will be enlarged upon by his successors, whoever they may be, precedents established by capable hands for desirable purposes are still precedents for incapable hands and undesirable purposes."

Harrison in Plea

With Democratic leaders expressing confidence that the House-approved measure would be passed next week in the form in which it was reported by the Finance Committee, Senator Harrison, committee chairman, made a plea for nonpartisan consideration.

"There should be no politics in this question," he said referring to the recent endorsement of the bill by Henry L. Stimson, the Hoover Secretary of State.

He pointed out other nations were using the tariff-treaty weapon to regain lost trade and authority for the president to make quick tariff changes in similar fashion was essential if the United States was to get back some of the $6,000,000,000 in international commerce he said it had lost since 1928.

In his first speech against the Roosevelt recovery program, Senator McN

Assassin Sought in Billings Case

Chicken-Thief Story Discounted—Rewards Reach Total $150

There were no important developments Friday in the Walter Billings murder case as officers started their second day's search for a clue which might lead to the unraveling of the mystery.

Police corrected a statement appearing in Thursday's Star, which said that the slayer escaped with 16 chickens after the shooting.

The chickens disappeared in a raid on the Billings coop the night before the killing, making it appear, officers believe, that Billings' assailant went to his home for one purpose—murder.

Close friends of the dead man were being questioned in an effort to learn of Billings' past life which might throw some light on the case and lead to a motive for the killing.

Two additional rewards for information leading to the arrest and conviction of the slayer were offered Friday.

Sheriff John L. Wilson posted a personal reward of $25.

Bois d'Arc camp, Woodmen of the World, of which Billings was a member, offered reward of $25.

The total offered is $150 as the city of Hope, through Mayor R. A. Boyett and Chief of Police Clarence Baker, announced Thursday a reward of $100.

Officers promised all information furnished them by citizens would be held strictly confidential.

Billings was shot to death Wednesday night at the rear of his home by a "supposed" chicken thief. He was buried Thursday afternoon in Friendship cemetery, four miles north of Rosston.

Deposit Insurance Up to $5,000 Asked

Roosevelt Said to Favor Doubling Present $2,500 Protection

Copyright, Associated Press

WASHINGTON, President Roosevelt was said to have indicated a willingness to agree on the insurance of bank deposits up to $5,000 instead of $2,500 as present law provides.

That increase, it was reported by members who have conferred with him, would be interpretable as a clear sign that neither the president nor congress intends to abandon Federal Bank deposit insurance.

A temporary plan guaranteeing deposits up to $2,500 were into effect last January 1. A permanent plan would go into effect on July 1, 1934, without additional legislation. The permanent plan would insure 100 per cent deposits up to $10,000, 75 per cent from $10,000 to $50,000 and 50 per cent over $50,000.

Because there has not been time for a satisfactory check of the soundness of banks, or for the necessary reorganization of some, Mr. Roosevelt insists that inauguration of the permanent proposal be postponed until July 1, 1935.

He wants to continue the temporary insurance, but when that was first suggested, friends of deposit insur

Is This a Second Manchukuo?

THE SOVIET UNION looks across the border from Russian Turkistan and sees in Sinkiang the answer to her hope for a former foothold in Central Asia, one that will give her a semblance of balance in the vast continent—with the British Lion and checkmate Japan.

SINKIANG—Chinese Turkistan—Four nations look with covetous eyes on this "Land That God Forgot," and the fate of Asia may rest on outcome of their machinations.

JAPAN vies for power in Sinkiang as a base to outflank Russia in case of war, to hamstring the Soviet by creating diversions near the Russian homeland, thereby drawing Soviet strength away from the Far East, where the main conflict would rage.

CHINA nominally owns Sinkiang, but her maneuvers are simply a forlorn hope to retain an area that she can not control, waging a losing fight to prevent a new partition move by the nations that reach greedily out for another slice of her vast territory.

FRANCE watches with mild interest the maneuvers of rival powers in Sinkiang, but ever ready to seize the rich provinces of China which border her Indo-China possessions.

BRITAIN fears Russian encroachment on Sinkiang as opening a way for the Soviet to strike at India. So London watches warily, tightening her hold on border countries, strengthening her frontier defenses, and increasing her sphere of influence in Tibet.

Roosevelt to Ask Ban Against War Shipments to So. America

American Envoys Approach Argentina and Brazil for Accord to Halt Fighting Between Bolivia and Paraguay

WASHINGTON.—(AP)—President Roosevelt Plans to send congress late Friday a message on munitions which generally is expected to recommend an embargo on arms to belligerent nations.

Meanwhile, under urgent State Department instruction, American envoys to Argentina, Brazil, Chile and Peru are seeking the support of those nations for a plain of joint action to bring an end to the 50-year struggle between Bolivia and Paraguay over the Chaco jungle area.

Both nations are land-locked, and munitions must come through adjoining countries.

In Geneva, Switzerland, a proposal for an embargo on arms shipments to the participants was referred to jurists by the League of Nations council after Costa Durel, Bolivian representative, opposed its application to his country on the ground that Paraguay could get shipments through river channels.

Six nations approved the embargo proposal as submitted by Great Britain.

John Summers, talented young pianist, will accompany Mr. Graham. He will be presented in a number of solos.

The program will be varied, consisting of songs from Handel and Mozart. Several numbers of popular melodies are listed.

The concert is sponsored by Friday Music club.

Dr. Dodd Elected Again by Baptists

Mississippi Pleds for Spiritual Revival in Modern Day

FORT WORTH, Texas.—(AP)—Dr. M. E. Dodd, head of the Dodd College in Shreveport, La., was reelected president of the Southern Baptist convention here Thursday. He had completed his first year as head of the church governing body. It has been the custom to give a president a tenure of three successive years.

Dr. L. R. Scarborough, of Fort Worth, president of the Southwestern Baptist Theological Seminary, was chosen first vice-president and Dr. John Lester Hurt of Jackson, Miss., second vice president. Hight C. Moore of Nashville, Tenn., and J. Henry Burnett of Macon, Ga., were reelected recording secretaries. Moore for his twenty-second time and Burnett for his fifteenth.

The convention Committee and Chaplains of the Army and Navy approved 17 of the 20 applications for places with the Army Reserve Corps during the year. The committee reported that five Southern Baptist ministers are with each the regular army and navy. Twenty-six are with the CCC camps.

The Hospital Commission reported that during the year 5,981 patients were given 39,730 days of service, of which 654 were treated free and 302 part free service at an expenditure of $28,311. During the year $26,800 was

Shreveport Girl's Slayer Is Hanged

Lockhart Executed There—Two Others Hanged at New Orleans

SHREVEPORT, La.—(AP)—Fred Lockhart, alias D. B. Napp, was hanged here Friday for criminally attacking and murdering Mae Griffin, 15-year-old Arkansas school girl here last month.

The trap was sprung at 12:13 p. m.

Two Hanged at New Orleans

NEW ORLEANS, La.—(AP)—George Dailao and John Capaci were hanged at Gretna jail shortly after noon Friday for the murder of Charles Rabito, grocery clerk, during a grocery hold-up.

The Texarkana Rotary club was host to the visitors from eight clubs, there being 18 in attendance from Hope, 18 from DeQueen, 16 from Ashdown, 12 from Stamps, seven from Nashville and two from Shreveport.

The Hope, DeQueen, Ashdown, Stamps and Nashville clubs are in the 62nd district; the Texarkana, Jefferson and Atlanta clubs are in the 48th district and the Shreveport club is in the 17th district.

The two past district governors were Henry L. Stilwell, of Texarkana, who was chairman of the program committee, and Ed McFadden of Hope, who is now chairman of the club service committee of Rotary International.

Stilwell alternated with R. W. Rodgers, president of the Texarkana club, as master of ceremonies, and McFadden addressed the club briefly on club service work.

Andy T. Ritchie Jr., with Miss Dorothy DeLoach as accompanist, sang several songs.

Many institutions—business, social and service—have gone on the rocks during the past few years. Johnson said, but it is not true of the Rotary. The membership, which was once about 200, but receded during the depression, to below 150,000, has started back with 98 new clubs this year, making a total of 3,682 clubs in 70 countries. The present membership is more than 151,000.

With nationalistic lines drawn more closely than ever, greater opportunity is offered Rotary for international service, Johnson said, and with economic recovery progressing, there is also more room for vocational service, while there is always a chance of expansion of community service.

The aster is a composite flower; the blossom is made up of clusters of small blooms, organized into groups, so they may be a greater attraction to bees.

BEHIND THE SCENES IN Washington

By RODNEY DUTCHER

NEA Washington Correspondent

WASHINGTON.—Eyebrows rise higher daily as Congresswoman Isabella Greenway—lovely, charming, dressy—continues to surprise those who thought her intimate friendship with the Roosevelts meant that she would be "New Dealish."

There was stir enough when she voted to override the president's veto of new veterans' benefits and restored federal salaries. But now insiders report that the gentlewoman from Arizona high-pressed the two senators from her state, Ashurst and Hayden, to vote the same way.

Ashurst had intended to support the veto. Hayden was on the fence. Democratic Leader Joe Robinson and Jimmy Byrnes had brought great pressure to bear on both. But the pressure—or charm—of Isabella was greater.

She is an important person in the politics and industry of Arizona. The brain trust crowd, already soured at Mrs. Greenway's appeal to union miners of Arizona to protect the securities act, frothed at the mouth when she rose on the House floor to urge the Bulwinkle amendment to the stock market bill.

The amendment would have taken stock market control from the Federal Trade Commission and staunch supporters of the measure, perhaps mistakenly, said it would ruin the bill.

Most recently Mrs. Greenway has been propagandizing quietly against the administration's bill for Indian self rule and land ownership. She was resentful at Roosevelt's strong public endorsement of the measure.

But personal relations with the White House still are cordial and close. Mrs. Greenway was bridesmaid at the Roosevelt wedding and has been a pal of Mrs. Roosevelt ever since.

Her re-election is almost certain. Her voting record on labor and veterans' bill is 100 per cent.

Busy—at the Ball Game

One of these afternoons some mean cuss in the Senate will demand collection of a quorum. And Sergeant-at-Arms Chesley Jurney will have to go trotting out to the American League ball park.

Hasn't he decided yet whether he will go through the stands tapping senators one by one or suspend the ball game, stand in the middle of the diamond, and plead with them to come on back to Capitol Hill.

Not that any senatorial secretary will admit the boss is away rooting for the home team. But when they're as evasive as eels as to his whereabouts, you know the answer.

Art Boos Up Again

Fearful of art controversies since it unveiled Gilbert White's classic mural, the Department of Agriculture is contemplating CWA Artist Julian Lee Rayford's panels depicting American folklore heroes, which Rayford suggests for the administration building.

Uncle Remus, Casey Jones, Paul Bunyan, and John Henry are among the subjects. Gutzon Borglum, visiting here, related that when he carved his great head of Lincoln, now in the Capitol rotunda, an old colored maid, watching features emerge, had demanded: "How'd you know Mars Lincoln's face was in that piece of stone?"

Pretty Elizabeth Wheeler, daughter of the Montana senator, will lead a "Good Will Day" delegation of students to the White House to urge complete world disarmament.

Fanny Ward, the celebrated 60-year-old flapper, called on Mrs. Greenway at the House. Fanny looks anywhere between 25 and 40 years old.

Robert W. Bruere, one of Dr. Wirt's "victims" and head of the Cotton Textile Industrial Relations Board, is a brother of Henry Bruere, New York banker, who served as Roosevelt's coordinator of credit efforts. Once he spent a Sunday afternoon on the Potomac on the presidential yacht with Roosevelt and Budget Director Lew Douglas. By mistake, a White House secretary had telephoned an invitation Saturday to him instead of Henry, with whom Roosevelt sought an important conference. Henry, meanwhile, had left town.

Mrs. Leo Wolman, young and vivacious wife of the Labor Advisory Board chairman, was in the midst of a cocktail party when her maid burst in to tell her the furnace was about to explode. A guest did something about it—just in time. ... Former Secretary of State Henry L. Stimson had been living in seclusion at his home here until about the time he endorsed the Roosevelt tariff bill. Since people realized he was still here, he has been sought for diplomatic and official parties and has been stepping out.

YOUR CHILDREN

By Olive Roberts Barton

Too Much Supervision Spoils Child's Play—Besides, It's Likely to Stifle His Initiative

There it was again. The children couldn't even play the way they wanted to.

It was recess and the third-graders were paraded out in formation to the recreation ground. This was all right—in fact necessary, because the lot was across the street and cars were likely to come by.

But once there, were the yellowed to whoop it up and yell and turn somersaults and run races? That would have been safe enough because a high wire fence encircled the field. No, they were formed into a large ring, holding hands, while one boy was chosen to tag another child and beat him to the "break," both running in opposite directions 'round the ring. It took time. The circle was large. Not more than ten or fifteen kids had a chance to move during the game. The rest stood and beamed in the sun.

Lack of Discipline

They got impatient—they wouldn't be good. They hopped up and down sometimes and let go hands. The teacher shouted and shouted and shouted. Her "discipline" was at stake. Poor dear, her face was worried and unhappy. Who might be observing her from the office window? One of the board members, or even the superintendent. Not the principal. I, a mere, for the principal isn't that kind. I know her.

But teachers are marked on discipline and control.

So are children.

Well, perhaps they have to be. I'm not saying that discipline isn't a good thing. There has to be some, even a good bit, but this affair of the playground now—why carry it so far?

In the old days we rang a bell, marched the youngsters out into the fresh air and let them go to it. Teachers had a peaceful ten minutes in the hall and ate apples while the janitor or anybody handy broke up fist fights.

Now their "free" time is subjugated. I think it is a shame. Who wants to stand in a circle while all the rest of the room (or a fifth of it) has the fun?

Yet we talk about the children having too much liberty. But honestly, how much liberty do most children really have?

Too Much Supervision

They live under pressure of organization. They begin early to join up with clubs. They have music and home work and plays or entertainments to rehearse for. Their very sports are supervised. Instead of the games on the sand lot, some gentlemen come along to organize a ball team and it's taken out of their hands from then on.

Then we say they can't stand on their own feet later on—that they can't think for themselves, and depend on the world for a living. Right. They can't and won't if we are going to spoil all spontaneity and initiative. The jobsters have a popular line today. It runs something like this, "Child to Mother—Must we really do what we want to again today?"

Look behind that. A child eternally supervised won't know what to do with free time when he gets it. You can't parcel out independence that way. You can't say, "Stand in the circle and do as you are told, darling," sixteen hours a day, and then hand him a day off and say, "Now be perfectly independent. It's your day to develop."

So They Say!

DONNA of the BIG TOP

CHAPTER XX

DONNA'S wedding day! The sun shone in an almost cloudless sky. The air was crisp and cool after several sultry weeks. A robin, singing in a catalpa tree outside her bedroom window, awakened Donna.

She looked at the clock on her dressing table and was amazed to find that it was after 8:30. Had she ever come to sleep so late? What consideration had prompted Mrs. Planter not to call her?

Of course she had lain awake very late the night before. Earlier in the evening she and Bill had sat on the river bank, their hands interlocked, until the dew had made shoes and clothing dank and uncomfortable. Then, under a brilliant moon, they had strolled slowly back to the house. There they had chatted together in a good night kiss that was like a farewell.

"Never again, sweetheart," Bill had whispered. "This is the last time we'll ever part."

The wedding was to take place at 12 o'clock. Only Grandfather Siddal and Mrs. Morgan, the minister's wife, besides the Reverend Morgan himself were to be present. Mrs. Planter had laughed nonetheless when she had been informed there was to be no wedding breakfast and no guests.

"Not that I expected to be invited. My land, no! Even if I lived here for five years I ain't anything more'n a servant to Madeline. I'd like to know what Amos Siddal would have done without me while that girl was galivantin' around the world!"

MINNIE JONES helped Donna dress. Shortly after Donna had eaten a breakfast consisting of little more than coffee, Minnie arrived, fearful and excited. She shampooed Donna's hair, raving over the glint of gold in the copper waves, regretted that the bride was not to wear a veil and trailing satin dress, but "reckoned" pink chiffon and a white leghorn hat trimmed in wild roses were just "too sweet."

From the living room window Mrs. Planter watched the trio depart—Grandfather in an old Prince Albert coat he insisted upon wearing (though the seams were green with age) since he had worn it at Madeline's father's wedding; Bill in a new suit of gray tweed; and Donna, looking lovelier than ever in the shell pink chiffon with tiny puffed sleeves and innumerable ruffles on the skirt.

The housekeeper turned away from the window, her lips set more tightly, if possible, than usual. She told Minnie to "shut up and go on home." Then she went upstairs to the room she had occupied since coming to the farm over five years before.

Of course that young upstart would send her packing. She'd known all along that Madeline Siddal had no use for her. Might as well start packing now as any time. Mrs. Planter dragged her old camel-back trunk down from the attic and took out the upper tray. The first thing she saw was the clear box containing her most cherished possessions; a lock of Nub's hair when his curls had been cut, a tincture of the late Mr. Planter, a bit of her wedding cake (a gray rock now), a sea shell picked up beside Lake Michigan the only time Mrs. Planter had ever visited Chicago, and—a rolled up, gaily-colored sheet of paper.

She took out this last and studied it, squinting over the tops of her spectacles. She scratched her head and pursed her lips. Madeline Siddal getting married in the arena, so the advertisement said.

SHE felt certain that neither Bill nor Amos Siddal knew anything of the wedding described in the hand bill and equally certain that Donna would not want them to know. It was, she thought, a good thing that she had kept the bill. She tucked it into the pocket of her apron and decided to wait a while before packing up to leave the farm.

Two hours later the bridal party returned. Donna was flushed and beautiful; Bill, ruddy and slightly embarrassed. The housekeeper was sitting in the hammock on the front porch, as bland and smiling as if she wished the young couple all the happiness in the world.

"I'm a husband, Mrs. Planter!" Bill cried, sprinting up the steps. "Congratulations! I'm the happiest man in the world!" He caught her hands and swung her to her feet.

"Land sakes," she gasped. "Don't do that! Well, I hope you will always be happy, but I don't approve of cousins marryin' and I'm not going to pretend I do."

"That woman is sheer vinegar," Donna laughed as Mrs. Planter went into the house.

A simple mid-day dinner was served. Then Donna, whose happiness made her desire peace with all the world, offered to help Mrs. Planter in the kitchen. Always before Donna's overtures had been refused but today the housekeeper nodded and said she reckoned a little help might come in handy.

As usual Grandfather went to his room for a nap and Bill went out to the fields. The two women were practically alone in the house. Mrs. Planter piled the dishes in the hot, sudsy water in silence and placed them, shining and dripping, in another pan for Donna to wipe.

Disbarment Asked for Two Lawyers

Charges by Secretary

Ickes Are Aired at Washington

WASHINGTON.—(AP)—Testimony to support Secretary Ickes' charges that a Chicago lawyer tried to force him to use his influence to obtain a political appointment for the lawyer was taken here Thursday.

Ickes has accused L. J. M. Malinin, and C. W. Larsen, both Chicago lawyers and seeks to have both disbarred. Frederick Z. Marx, a lawyer, took depositions from witnesses Thursday and will present them to a commission of the Illinois Supreme Court June 5.

In the testimony was a story of how Louis R. Glavis, chief of the Investigating Division of the Interior Department, and Theodore Mack, Secretary Ickes' private stenographer, stood in an ante room of Ickes' office and heard a conversation between Ickes and Malinin.

Mack, corroborated by Glavis, testified that on July 13, 1933, Malinin came to Ickes' office and said he wanted to see President Roosevelt, and wanted the secretary to use his influence to obtain for Malinin an appointment as governor of the Virgin Islands.

Mack said that Ickes told the lawyer that Marvin H. McIntyre, one of the president's secretaries, handled the chief executive appointments. Malinin told Ickes he had papers relating to the "Saunders estate given him by Larsen" and that Larsen was considering bringing charges of fraud in connection with settlement of the estate.

Mack said that Malinin told Ickes that he could prevent the action if the secretary would use his influence to obtain the Virgin Island appointment. He added that the secretary replied he did not care "what Larsen did" and that the estate had been properly settled.

William W. Harrison, of the Public Works Administration staff, testified that last summer Malinin told him that he had "one trump card" in his efforts to get the federal government

Frontiers
There is a far-flung frontier of the stars.
Which is the end of all we may know.
There is a frontier of the intellect
Which we may but approach—no further go.
Beyond lies Faith's broad domain; a fair land
Where our stilled hopes shall rise from Heaven's pure sod,
And all these hidden things be ours to know
Which we have pondered at the feet of God.

One of the prettiest parties of the Spring season was given by Mrs. M. M. McClellan on Thursday afternoon when she entertained at bridge at her hospitable home on E. 2nd St. Lovely pink radiance roses were used in profusion in carrying out the color scheme, which was also observed in the bridge accessories and the ribbons of the favors. Bridge was played from eight tables with Mrs. Edwin Stewart, Mrs. W. Q. Warrick and Mrs. E. P. Young winning the attractive favors. At the conclusion of the game, the hostess, assisted by Mrs. Bill Smith, Mrs. Jack Bush, Mrs. W. Q. Warrick, Mrs. Thos. Kinser, Mrs. R. D. Franklin and Mrs. E. M. McWilliams served a most tempting salad course.

The regular monthly meeting of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union was held at 3 o'clock Thursday afternoon, May 17th at the home of Mrs. W. M. Cuntley on E. 2nd St. with Mrs. R. W. Muldrow as assistant hostess.

There was a splendid attendance and the meeting opened with the hymn, "Faith of Our Mothers," which was followed with prayer by Mrs. T. R. King, president. Minutes were read and approved and the treasurer, Mrs. Ida Boyett reported a small balance after paying taxes on the lots owned by the organization, which are now offered for sale. The president called attention to the fact that the next meeting June 14 would be the Flower Mission Day and all members are urged to bring flowers to be distributed to the sick, hospitals and shut-ins. This meeting will be at the home of Miss Mabel Ethridge on N. Main St. with Mrs. W. Y. Foster Jr. as joint hostess. The business meeting closed with the singing of "My Mother, 'Tis of Thee." A splendid program on "Progressive Womanhood" followed with Mrs. A. C. Kolb discussing, "The Value of Woman in the Picture of Progress." Two beautiful solos, "The Old Spinning Wheel" and "When I Am with You," by Mrs. H. D. Mayer, with Mrs. J. C. Carlton at the piano. A most interesting original talk on "What We Owe to Our Daughters and What We Hope to Bequeath to Them" was given by Mrs. D. B. Thompson. During the social hour the hostess served a delicious strawberry ice.

Celebrating her fifth birthday anniversary, little Miss Dora Lou Franks entertained a group of her young friends at a party on Thursday afternoon at the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Kline Franks on W. 5th St.

Tyler, Jimmie Copeland Carolyn Sue Cornelius, Ellsworth Bailey, Joyce Spears, Sidney Warren, Stanford, Walters, John Stroud, Willard and Jean Underwood, Charles Leonard Hughes and Billy Taylor.

Mrs. W. L. Patterson of St. Louis and little niece, Judy Ann Steup of Dayton, Ohio, who have been spending the past week at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Briggs at Rocky Mount are spending the week end in town, the guests of Mrs. Patterson's sister, Mrs. Walter Carter and Mr. Carter.

E. K. Cox of Gloster, Miss., gave an inspirational talk based on the question: "Can we have a spiritual revival in the Twentieth century?"

He described this age as a "pleasure mad" one, an era when sins, formerly forced by public opinion to hide in the gutters and cess pools have crawled out.

"It is the time of the crude and the nude, the vulgar vaudeville, the cheap sex movie where modesty, virtue and self restraint are the butt of the ribald jest," the speaker said. "It is a period when a radio crooner of cheaply suggestive songs commands greater remuneration than a United States senator and a Hollywood ac-content that a heavily armed Mexican is not calculated to provoke mirth. But my uneasiness was soon dispelled. The Mexican proceeded to reveal the fact that he was my brother in a world-wide fraternity. He had noticed an emblem of the order on a belt buckle I was wearing. Instructions followed. Our new friend informed us that he was Jefe de los Rurales, (Chief of the Mounted Police) of the district.

That was indeed good news. Since we were confronted with the possibility of having to sleep on a plaza bench, or the river bank, it would be comforting to know that we had police protection. At least we wouldn't be picked up for a vagrancy charge.

The three of us immediately went to the cantina and ordered a keg custodian to do his duty. Please bear in mind that the day was hot, muggy and frequent libations a necessity. The Mexican, to whom I shall hereafter refer to as El Jefe, because I have forgotten his name, asked if we were going to remain overnight and hear the music. We informed him that such was our intention, and explained our predicament about securing a place to sleep. With an expressive shrug of his big shoulders saying plainer that words that we had no cause to worry with him to look out for us, he turned to the bartender and said: "The caballeros are friends of mine; they have come down from Marfa to hear the band concert and can't get a room in the hotel. I want you to let them use your bed."

The bartender favored us with an affable smile. "Muy bien senores; con gusto," he replied. So that was settled. The cantina was in a long building facing the plaza. About a third of the building toward the front had been partitioned off for the bar and tables. Space behind the partition was cluttered with counters, boxes and empty beer cases. The wall on the street side was without apertures of any kind—not even a small window; but double doors in the inside wall opened into a sort of indoor court. Enough space had been cleared near these doors to make room for the bartender's bed. When we retired that night, the kind, hospitable fellow, slept on

Storks Move Up to Second Place

Victory Over Atlanta, 6 to 3, Advances Hope Club in League

Hope Storks advanced into second place in the Two States League with a victory here Thursday afternoon over the Atlanta Jackrabbits, 6 to 3. Elliott allowed the visitors 12 hits, but kept them well scattered. He was strong in the pinches, striking out nine batters. Elliott's best work was in the ninth inning when he cut short a threatened rally by retiring Henderson on strikes. Henderson is the leading hitter of the league.

Elliott was given good support by his team mates, two runners being thrown out the plate.

Burton-Ward Grocers will come here Sunday afternoon. The Grocers, who have been in the cellar all season, showed new life Thursday by defeating the league leading Tremen, 7 to 2. Kenneth Madison, who beat the Grocers last Sunday in his first attempt on the mound for the Storks, will be sent against them again this Sunday. Madison has been holding down the shortstop position for the Storks, and doing a nice job of it. He is a right-hander.

a hard counter with just one quilt under him. Chris and I snoozed comfortably in his bed.

Are Given a Guard
El Jefe offered to place a guard at the front door of the cantina in order to keep drinks from disturbing our sleep. He explained that some of the boys might whoop it up after the concert, for a visit from the commanding General of the state was a big event in Ojinaga. We gratefully declined the services of a guard, feeling that El Jefe had done enough for us.

The concert was an enjoyable one. We felt well rewarded for the time and effort it had cost us to hear it. Nothing is more soothing to me than Spanish-American music when played by Mexicans in their country for their own entertainment. Then too, being treated so royally by El Jefe and the bartender added a lot to the pleasures of the trip. It was with genuine regret that we bade our friends farewell the next morning.

I have heard a great many Americans say that Mexicans are treacherous, unreliable—that none of them can be trusted. I claim the right to entertain a dissenting opinion.

once immediately dubbed it an effort to destroy the deposit guarantee system.

Chairman Steagall, Democrat, Alabama, of the house banking committee proposed that from July 1, 1934, to January 1, 1935, the temporary insurance be raised to $5,000 and that after January 1, 1935, it be increased to $10,000.

The president was said to believe that $10,000 was too high, but that $5,000 would be acceptable.

REPUBLICANS HIT

Nary of Oregon, the Republican leader, replied to Harrison. He demanded that affected industries be afforded a public hearing before a rate change was made operative and said the bill contained a "sufficiently drastic departure from our tried and tested ways of government to justify stout opposition."

McNary asked Harrison if he would accept an amendment excluding agricultural commodities from the bill. Harrison refused, saying such a proposal was "almost destructive" of the whole measure and that it would set up agriculture against industry.

The minority leader tried to get Harrison to specify particular commodities that would be dealt with in the negotiations with other nations, but the Mississippian warded off all such attempts.

Harrison said there was no way of telling in advance what articles would be bargained for purposes.

Bilious Attacks

For bilious attacks due to constipation, thousands of men and women take Theodor's Black-Draught because it is purely vegetable and brings prompt, refreshing relief. "I have used Black-Draught," writes Mr. T. L. Austin, of McAdenville, N. C. "There is a package of it on my mantel now. I take it for biliousness. If I did not take it, the dullness and headache would put me out of business. It is the quickest medicine to relieve me that I know."
